The leaves have not yet fallen, the grass is still so green
The birds flew up in flocks together, love left my heart for good

Reflections keep on changing in the still of Moscow ponds Our gestures slowly melted and no words are left unsaid

Like in a fairy tale, patterns were born, weaving into mirage
The bonds have shattered to pieces, and we're no more: you and I

We can't bring back what has passed us, no use to even start
The old quarrels have all faded, forgotten the seal of hurt

Anxiety wandered under the skin, looking for words to get out You cannot glue fear to love and hide it in tears of the soul

The heart is looking straight ahead and believes it will find And step by step, so stubborn, another heart comes its way
